What Is Telehealth?

The Department of Health and Human Services describes telehealth (also known as telemedicine) as the use of electronic information and telecommunication technologies to offer care when you and your doctor aren't in the same place at the same time.

Telehealth helps you and your family get the care you need when you can't make it to the doctor.

Visit with your doctor from home or the place that works best for you.

What Types of Care Can I Get With Telehealth?

During the state of emergency related to the COVID-19 pandemic, Medicaid has expanded the services offering telehealth care.

Covered services include routine, primary care visits as well as the following services:

- Well-child visits
- Behavioral analysis services
- Early intervention services
- Specified behavioral health and therapy services
 - ▶ Individual and family therapy
 - ▶ Individual therapy for mental health and substance abuse
 - ▶ Medication management
 - ▶ Medication-assisted treatment services

Find Out If Your Doctor Offers Telehealth

More and more doctors are offering telehealth to help care for their patients.

To find a doctor who offers telehealth, try these options:

- Reach out to your doctor.

Many of Community Care Plan providers offer telehealth services. Contact your doctor for more information.

- Use Teladoc.

This is a service offered by Community Care Plan to treat non-emergency issues (allergies, flu, eye issues, sinus infections, rashes, sore throat, and more).

Teladoc provides virtual visits or care with a licensed doctor from a computer, tablet or smartphone 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

For more information or to sign up, visit Teladoc.com.

What Do I Need for a Virtual Visit?

For many, virtual appointments are new, and it may be your first time seeing a doctor through a screen.

Here is what you will need and some tips to keep in mind before your visit:

- A computer, tablet or smartphone, based on your type of visit
- A strong internet connection, so the video or call does not drop
- A way to chat with your doctor, before or after your appointment, if needed (text or email are most common)
- Important health records or medications, so you can reach them quickly and provide the information or review them with your doctor
